A. D. Smith, Former Borden Resident, Has 12 Great-Grandchildren

A. D. Smith, 86 years of age, a former resident of Borden, boasts of 12 great-grandchildren. Raymond Fenner Roeske, 22, of Wellsville is the oldest and James Fenner Taft, 3, of Woodhull is the youngest. He has five grandchildren, Arlington Smith of Albany, Merriel Taft Roeske of Wellsville, Bert D. and Forrest Taft of Woodhull. His children are Mrs. F. E. Taft of Woodhull, Mrs. Maude E. Smith of Albany and Frank R. Smith of Albion of whose home he is a beloved member. Mr. Smith enjoys good general health but for the past several months has been confined to the house by a very painful foot trouble. He passes most of his time in a wheel chair reading and finds many things of interest to him in the Addison Advertiser. He is often heard whistling or singing bits of old time songs. His family and many friends wish for him a speedy recovery and hope to see him walking again soon.

Young Deer Invades Addison Business Section

Kenneth Mock, James McBrearty and Ralph Wade of the Advertiser staff were treated to a rare incident last Saturday morning when a small doe deer practically ran into them. The aforementioned boys were taking pictures in front of the Advertiser shop when the deer approached, seeing them the deer whirled and ran against the back of John Russ' store. The deer finally made its escape by swimming the river and disappearing in the woods beyond the Erie depot.

Hi-Lights and Shadows of the Week's News

Bruno Richard Hauptmann finally paid with his life Thursday night for the kidnaping and murder of the Lindbergh baby. Although New Jersey officials would have liked to write "finis" on the state's most notorious crime, Governor Hoffman still appears determined to press on with his investigation. Hardly a person took seriously the charges against Paul Wendel, except private detective Ellis Parker a confidante in the Governor's private probe. Political angles of the case again bobbed up when a New Jersey Republican demanded Hoffman withdraw his name as a candidate for delegate to the Cleveland convention.

Attacking the New Deal in a speech Saturday evening, Herbert Hoover charged that the most dangerous invasion of liberty had not been in the economic field, but in the "corruption of clear thinking". The former president in his address at Fort Wayne, Ind., stated the Supreme Court had been able to check moves against economic freedom, but the spread of propaganda by government officials, seizure of private communications, and personal attacks upon citizens constituted a more dangerous reach for power over the lives of individuals.

Tornadoes the past few days have taken 300 lives in 6 states. Some 133 persons were reported dead in Tupelo, Miss., and 122 more were killed at Gainesville, Ga., while two trainloads of injured were sent to Atlanta Hospitals. Two thousand persons were said to be homeless in Gainesville, while property damage was estimated as high as five million.

Dairymen's League Distributes $530,000

New York—The Dairymen's League Cooperative Association, Inc., is distributing $530,359 in interest to holders of the Association's Certificates of Indebtedness.

Interest on the Association's Certificates of the EE '41, '43, '44 and '45 issues become due May 1, but under authorization of the Board of Directors Treasurer J. A. Coulter began making payments late in March. Payments are being made as fast as holders of Certificates present their interest coupons.

The Dairymen's League is urging presentation of $194,000 worth of DD Certificates which were called for payment May 1, 1935, and upon which interest ceased on that date. Holders of these Certificates have nothing to gain by not cashing them. They are merely depriving themselves of the use of this money which the Association is anxious to pay.

Misdirected Sympathy

Addressing a group of young people in an Elmira church a short time ago George King, prominent Corning attorney, made the following thought-provoking remark:

"In dealing with major criminals we need to recognize that the slayer has taken a human life, that the kidnaper has inflicted untold suffering, that the thief has brought woe to the innocent, that the despoiler of womanhood has ruined a life. We need to feel the sympathy for the victim, now lavished upon the accused."

A short, concise paragraph, yet Mr. King has assuredly voiced the reason for more than fifty percent of the miscarriage of justice in this country today. And any student of American life today, knows that miscarriage of justice almost invariably means the offender gets off with a whole skin while society continues to suffer the misdeeds of the wrong-doer.

Two or three elements might be quoted which have prompted the present state of law enforcement that makes our country a bed of roses for the habitual criminal. One has been the many sob-sister societies which flourished on misdirected public sympathy. Another has been the failure of the American Bar to stamp out a few unprincipled lawyers who are in league with the hardened criminals so adroitly, that the defense for many a major crime today is built before the crime is committed. Mr. King referred to another cause elsewhere in his talk which was printed in last week's issue of this paper. That is, the abuse of the parole system sending hardened criminals, unchastened, out to again prey upon society.

As the Corning lawyer pointed out, our sympathy has been directed in the wrong quarter. The innocent victim of the murderer struck down in cold blood, killed often times without the slightest chance of even physical self-defense, is given only one or two days of hasty pity by the crowd. Then our maudlin sympathy starts working for the criminal, and no matter how cruel his deed, how premeditated his taking of a human life, we immediately surround him with every possible legal means of escape. Alibi witnesses whom even a child could tell are prejuring themselves, are matched with equal favor against the testimony of persons of known veracity. So obsessed have we become with the idea of giving an accused criminal every "reasonable doubt", public sympathy provides an air-tight defense for many a lawbreaker, long before the jury is drawn in his trial.

Perhaps no more disgracing a spectacle of perverted sense of justice was ever exhibited, than the present farce of the Hauptmann stay of execution. Here is a man given a fair trial extending over many weeks. Defended by some of the keenest criminal lawyers in the country, the German carpenter was found guilty by a jury of his peers and condemned to die. Every possible safeguard of appeal was accorded the convicted murderer of innocent little Charles Lindbergh, even the Supreme Court of the United States ruling all constitutional rights had been observed in his trial. And then on top of all the reasons justice should be carried out, the Governor of New Jersey granted a reprieve and started some private sob-sister maneuvers, which bid fair to make American perversion of justice a laughing word throughout the world.

It is to be hoped the ridiculous lengths to which Governor Hoffman has gone in attempting to delay the execution of Hauptmann, will be a turning point in our coddling of criminals. Already it is apparent the press of the country is a unity in ridiculing these maudlin tactics, tactics which hint at kidnaping a week-kneed victim and beating a forced confession from his lips in the attempt to save a murderer from the chair. That the executive of a great state should be mixed into such a miserable affair, should warn all common citizens of the hocus pocus of our misdirected sympathy.

Doubtful Beneficiaries

Members of Congress are showing a sudden interest in the question of who got the important slices of the billion dollars in benefit payments that went to farmers between August, 1933 and January, 1936. Meanwhile officials of the old AAA are said to be doing some fast thinking to conjure up ways of preventing this information being made public. The agitation over this question in Washington is said to be momentarily obscuring the moves to put the new $500,000,000 so-called soil conservation measure into effect.

In tilting the lid a little bit the other day on the old AAA pot of gold, Senator Vandenberg said:

"I understand the average corn-hog benefit payment in Iowa is under $400. But I know, for example, about one corn-hog contract in another state where the beneficiary was paid $219,825 in two years for not raising hogs on 445 acres.

"Again, I understand the average cotton contract throughout the south is under $1,500. But I know, for example, about one cotton contract which paid $168,000 for not planting 7,000 acres."

Chester Davis, AAA administrator was grizzled in the House Agricultural Committee on the new soil conservation program and some Congressman asked him a few unpleasant questions regarding the size of some of the benefit payments under the outlawed system. "Is there anything to the story that payments as high as $200,000 have been made to a single individual or property", Mr. Davis weaseled that no such payment had been called to his attention, but that an insurance company owning land in different places might have reached that much. Asked if there were many payments of $100,000 and $50,000 the administrator fell behind the old witness evasion of "I do not know."

Why not publish the true facts and figures about AAA benefit payments? Certainly no honest farmer who believed in the contract he signed would object to his benefits being made public. The fact of the matter is the administration does not want the full story of its wasteful spending of AAA funds revealed in a crucial election year. There have been too many checks written in huge figures, passed out in the guise of aiding agriculture.

Information has been wormed out of some officials that large insurance companies and banks were among those receiving the fattest checks. During the first year of the corn-hog control plan some of the biggest checks were sent to individuals around Boston, Mass., who were listed as "garbage feeders." They maintained large numbers of hogs to consume city garbage, and when Secretary Wallace dressed Uncle Sam up in a Santa Claus suit these people were right in line to benefit handsomely. Yet garbage feeders, banks and insurance companies had no more place in a scheme of planned agriculture than should doctors or undertakers. Regimented Americans, like regimented Russians are subject to the whims and foibles of those holding the reins of power.

When one considers how the Brain Trusters who surround and make up the President's official family, have fostered their creed of class hatred—setting the less fortunate up to believing the rich have systematically tried to grind them under the heel—the payment of agriculture benefit checks up into hundreds of thousands is anything but consistent. It is small wonder the AAA administrator has been busy thinking up excuses to prevent Congress making public the fact millions of dollars in benefit checks went to men who get their milk out of bottles and get no nearer to the soil than a city pavement.

"Heaven knows that heavy taxation will be necessary in the United States for a long time to come. But the voters are entitled to insist that it be levied wisely and equitably, and that the money raised be spent without waste or extravagance."

—New York Times.

"Despite uncertainty and arverse political activities and threats of governmental control and competition, there is reason to expect continuation of the upward (business) movement in 1936, provided no more hampering, fear engendering legislation be enacted."

EXPLOSION OF TOWNSEND BUBBLE

By MARK SULLIVAN

THE explosion of acrimony between a Townsend member of Congress who wants all the Townsend followers to go into the Democratic party and Dr. Townsend himself, who apparently does not want to decide yet what his organization will do in the coming campaign, must serve further to bring doubt and disillusion to the naive believers in the plan. To this source of disenchantment will be added the light which the Congressional committee investigating the promotion of the plan will throw on the methods of organizing clubs and on the emoluments of organizers. The sum of these and other events would seem likely to shatter the dream of eight to ten million elderly folk.

Evaporation of the dream had to come sooner or later. I have never heard of, and I do not believe there exists, one competent statistician or other authority who believes it possible to pay $200 a month to every person over sixty. The largest old-age pension that qualified students believe even faintly possible would be less than a fifth of $200 a month (and that would be only to the needy and only after some years). To pay more than $40 a month to everybody more than sixty could be accomplished only if accompanied automatically by an inflation, a dilution, which would reduce proportionately the value of each dollar, both those in the old folks' pension checks and those of everybody.

That $200 a month is not possible was already known in the inner and higher circles of the Townsend organization. When they were obliged to talk facts and figures to persons who knew, and when they wrote a proposed measure for Congress, they did not say "$200 a month." They merely proposed that a 2 per cent tax be laid on every transaction of any kind, and that the proceeds be applied to old-age pensions as far as they could reach. But throughout the country, in the villages and among the unsophisticated, in soliciting members and organizing the clubs they continued to present the promise of $200 a month. For recruiting members and collecting dimes and quarters of dues they relied upon the vision which the concrete figures "$200 a month" conjured up, the release from anxiety, the financial security, the modest luxuries which the old folks visualized.

The potency of the Townsend plan did not lie in its economics, for it had none. The allurement did not lie in its arithmetic, for the plan could not stand the test of addition and substraction. Essentially the Townsend plan indeed was not arithmetic, but an anodyne for arithmetic. Its allurement lay in its promise that something which never was on land or sea might nevertheless be. Just because it denied hard facts, it was surcease for that universal spiritual malaise which the poet Housman described:

To think that two and two make four,
And never five nor three,
The heart of man has long been sore—
And long 'tis like to be.

Such a phenomenon, as belief in the Townsend plan is described by modern psychologists as "wishful thinking"—thinking that what we wish to happen will happen. Let no one suppose the train is confined to elderly folks longing for ease in their declining years. Nearly all of us do it; it is so common as to be almost a national American trait. Belief in the magic of slogans has determined some of our most important national policies. President Wilson told us our expedition to Europe was in a "war to end wars"—and we know now all wars are not ended. He told us it was a "war to make the world safe for democracy"—and democracy has been losing ground ever since.

President Harding uttered a phrase which our wishful thinking converted into a credo of faith, "Back to normalcy." Wherever the world has been since 1920, it was not "back" and decidedly not toward "normalcy." President Coolidge, giving his Yankee dictum about the debts owed to the American government by European governments, used a terse Vermont idiom which we all quoted as irrefutable finality, "They hired the money, didn't they?" The implication was that the debts must be paid and would be paid. They have not been and won't be. Hardly anybody now expects those debts to be paid by all the debtors or in their original terms.

In the latter part of Mr. Coolidge's administration there arose a slogan which practically all believed, all "fell for." The "new economic era" meant a golden age of sustained plenty, two cars in every garage, perpetual economic sunshine, "'taint goin' to rain no mo'." The same assurance was conveyed by an equivalent phrase, invented by a quite distinguished university professor of economics, "new economic plateau," meaning a new level of prices, from which they would never descend. As I recall, the period of that phrase's confident currency was just about a month before the stock market crash of 1929.

About all that we had our disillusionment, suffered our "cold gray dawn of the morning after." But the experience did not cure us of our faith in the sorcery of words. In 1931 we believed that "prosperity is just around the corner." In the fall of 1932 the magic promise of panacea that swept the country was "technocracy." The bemusement of that, strong while it lasted, was cut short by the tangible emergence, on March 4, 1933, of a promise more immediate and more easily understood, the "New Deal," the "more abundant life."

One symbol of the "more abundant life" was the blue eagle. Today the blue eagle is dead; on a remote hillside of some avian Valhalla its bones lie whitening. But our proneness to the necromancy of symbols, the inveiglement of verbal opium, has not diminished. Possibly it is just as well. Perhaps it is our faith in the dream that enables us the more confidently to "shake the iron fist of fate." And possibly one dream in a hundred or so really comes true.

Introduction To The Tax Bill

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Congressman Hill and the House Committee have gone about the preparation of the new tax bill in a way which must convince the country that they mean to be fair. We have come a long way since those preposterous days last summer when in the course of one week the tax system was to be revised drastically without study, without hearings and without debate. This time we have a tentative bill offered as a starting point for discussion, and a committee which acts as if it were looking for light on a difficult subject.

The discussion has already gone far enough, I think, to warrant the tentative conclusions that the proposed tax on undivided corporation profits is right in its intention but in its method highly questionable. So at least, without pretending to expert knowledge of corporation finance, it seems to me.

In order to clear our minds of prejudice on the subject, it should be said at once that the taxation of undivided corporate profits is not the invention of Mr. Tugwell or of any other member of the President's kitchen cabinet. Such a tax was proposed by the Senate Finance Committee as early as 1917, with every member except one approving. It was approved in 1920 by the Secretary of the Treasury, Mr. Houston, and on May 7, 1924, the Senate by a vote of 43 to 32 adopted it. Though the tax was eliminated in the conference between the two houses of Congress, twenty-one members of the present Senate voted in the affirmative, including Senator Glass of Virginia.

It is interesting to note, also, that in 1920 the Chancellor of the Exchequer in a preponderantly conservative British government, stated that his justification for imposing an additional tax on corporate income was that: "Partners in a private partnership pay supertax not merely on the profits they divide, but also on the undivided profits which they place to reserve. No such charge falls upon the undivided profits of limited liability companies."

A proposal, having these antecedents, is surely entitled to be considered dispassionately.

It helps, I believe, to a clear understanding of the matter if we start by fixing in mind that for partnerships and individual enterprises, for salaried and professional men, there is in the eyes of the government no such thing as undivided profits. All profits are subject to the normal tax of 4 per cent, plus a surtax graduated up to 75 per cent. Undivided profits can exist only when the partners, that is to say the stockholders, are incorporated. Then a strange thing happens. On the profits earned but not paid out as dividends all the partners, that is the stockholders, pay a flat tax of 12½ to 15 per cent, depending not on the size of the stockholder's income but on the size of the corporation's income. The result is that the little stockholder pays a much bigger tax on his undistributed profit than he would pay if his profits were issued to him in dividends. On the other hand, the rich man pays a much smaller tax on his undistributed profits than he would pay if they were passed to him in dividends.

The government loses on the whole transaction. For what it gains from the little stockholder is greatly exceeded by what it loses to the rich stockholder. The net loss for this year is estimated at $620,000,000. That is to say, if the profits men earn when they are partners in an incorporated business were treated like the profits of unincorporated partners, the government would receive an additional $620,000,000 in taxes.

These $620,000,000 are at present a sheer subsidy arising out of the privilege of doing business in corporate form. There is no reason whatever why the other taxpayers should provide this subsidy.

This is the ground on which I believe it may be said that the Administration proposal is sound in its intention. It aims to withdraw this subsidy.

Unfortunately, however, it does this not by direct means, that is by taxing all profits, corporate or incorporate, distributed or undistributed, on the same graduated scale, but indirectly by a punitive tax. Instead of saying to stockholders—"Your earnings per share of stock shall be taxed as your income, whether you take them out in dividends or leave them undivided"—the government wishes to say: "That part of your earnings which is not divided will now be taxed heavily enough to yield a tax equal to that which the government would obtain if they were divided."

Now under this method the government collects its $620,000,000 all right. It does justice to itself. But how about the little stockholder for whom it was so solicitous? He may be worse off than ever. For if the directors of his corporation decide to pay the heavier tax in order to create a reserve, the little fellow's undistributed earnings in a big corporation are now taxed not merely 15 per cent but perhaps twice as much. The injustice to the little fellow may be accentuated and the privilege of the big fellow, though it is reduced, is not eliminated.

The basic fallacy of the method would seem to lie in the fact that instead of taxing earnings as income, whether or not they are distributed, it seeks to force the distribution of earnings by exacting a penalty if they are not distributed. As a consequence

Macy-Borah Forces Defeated In New York Primary Test Thurs.

Albany—Supporters of W. Kingsland Macy, former Republican State Chairman, suffered stinging defeats in the Primaries last week when the regular organization candidates throughout the state registered sweeping victories in contests for uninstructed and unpledged delegates to the National Republican Convention to be held in June in Cleveland.

Macy and his followers received their most crushing defeat in Nassau County where regular organization candidates for delegates and alternates, led by J. Russell Sprague, Republican County Leader, chalked up a victory of almost 12 to 1 in the primary balloting. With more than 20,000 votes cast in Nassau County, the insurgent group, headed by C. Walter Randall, garnered but a scant 2,000 votes, the powerful Republican machine in Nassau functioning with clocklike regularity.

While Mr. Macy managed to win his home territory in Suffolk County by some 3,000 votes, he went down to additional defeat in Queens, the entire setback very definitely operating against the candidacy of Senator William E. Borah, whose cause Mr. Macy espoused in his recent comeback effort.

GOP Leaders Hold Parley

Republican National Committeemen and Committeewomen and Republican State Chairmen from the Middle Atlantic States, attended a conference called by National Republican Chairman Henry P. Fletcher in the Barr Building, Washington, beginning at 10 o'clock last Saturday morning. The purpose of the conference was to discuss party problems generally and outline steps to be taken in connection with the coming campaign this fall. Both Chairman Eaton and National Committeeman Charles D. Hilles attended, as did Vice Chairman Mrs. Robert Low Bacon.

Addresses Young Republicans

The necessity for party harmony and the further development of the "team spirit in the party" were stressed by Assemblyman Arthur L. Swartz, of Erie County, in an address made last Friday evening in White Plains before the Board of Governors of the Westchester County Young Republican Clubs.

Mr. Swartz told his auditors that discord in the party would work against a militant drive by the Republican Party in state and nation to "overthrow the New Deal and rout the Brain Truster dynasty in Washington." He was warmly applauded.

As a result of the action of Governor Lehman in signing the bill extending state control over the milk industry for another year, price fixing powers and regulatory provisions of the present law will continue until April 1st, 1937. The Governor signed the milk control bill on April 1st, after the measure had fought a nip-and-tuck race against time. It is worthy of comment that this bill, while introduced by a Democratic Assemblyman, was reported out by the Republican-controlled Assembly Committee on Agriculture in preference to an identical bill introduced by Assemblyman Fred A. Young, (Rep) Lewis County. Assemblyman Howard N. Allen of Dutchess County, in explaining his actions in reporting out the Democratic bill in preference to that of Mr. Young, said: "We want to keep the subject of milk and milk control free of politics. Believing that the farmers wanted this milk control continued and further believing that this control is in the best interest of the industry, my Committee took action on a non-political, non-partisan basis. The bill should have passed—I am glad that it did, and I am equally pleased the Governor has signed it."

Budget Conferences Begin Tuesday

Conferences over the budget and between committees of both Houses, get under way Tuesday at 2 o'clock when Senators Dunnigan, Fearon and Twomey meet with a committee from the Assembly headed by Speaker Irving M. Ives, and including Assemblymen Heck, Moffat, Stone and Steingut. While the conferences are in progress, and it is anticipated a considerable number of them will be necessary before the important budget question is settled, members of the Legislature who are not members of the Conference Committee will remain at their homes while the Legislature is in unofficial recess.

According to reports current at Albany both sides in the budget dispute are adamant and determined to uphold the positions they have taken "if it takes all summer". Privately, word is expressed that some sort of settlement is expected to materialize within two weeks, and it is predicted that the Democratic Senate and the Governor will yield to the Republican demand to cut the budget by more than $15,000,000 and to slash at least one cent from the emergency gasoline taxes. It is further believed that after the returns from the increased state income tax begin to come in on and after April 15th, the Governor may make known that the projected increases in state revenue from the taxes may permit of the elimination of one cent of the gasoline tax after all. This, of course, is an entirely unofficial statement.

World's Fair Committee Meets

The Joint Legislative Committee on the World's Fair will meet in New York City at noon Thursday, April 9 and will proceed to the proposed site of the Fair, located in Flushing Meadows, Queens, where they will inspect it and discuss future plans. Senator John J. Dunnigan, President pro tem of the Senate is Chairman of the Committee; Assemblyman Herbert Brownell, Jr., is Vice Chairman and Senator Joseph D. Nunan of Queens, is Secretary. Senator Joseph Clark Baldwin, of New York City and Speaker Irving M. Ives, as well as Senator George R. Fearon are also members of the World's Fair unit. Still other members include Senators Jeremiah F. Twomey and Thomas F. Burchill, and Assemblymen Abbot Low Moffat, Peter Farrell and Robert Crews of Kings County. Under the terms of the enabling resolution, the committee must report its recommendations to the Legislature on or before April 9th, as to whether or not state aid to the Fair is feasible.

Additional Legislative Activities

The bill of Assemblyman Jane Todd, Westchester Republican, to make desertion for three years a cause for divorce, was defeated in the Assembly last week by a vote of 93 to 35. The vote, which cut sharply across party lines, defeated the measure by an even heavier vote than a similar bill introduced three years ago. Despite the defeat of the bill Miss Todd courageously declared that it was definitely in the public interest in view of the collusion consistently manifest in divorce cases in the state. In defense of her bill Miss Todd, after declaring that New York State and South Carolina are the only two states in the union which do not accept desertion on grounds for divorce, said in part:

"This State is dealing unwisely with conditions which it chooses to ignore. Injustice, suspicion, collusion, framed evidence, all tend to debase the courts and destroy respect for our law.

Eaton to Be Feted

Republican State Chairman Melvin C. Eaton, will be the guest of honor at a testimonial dinner to be given him by the Young Republican Club of Sherburne, Chenango County, on Thursday evening, April 9th. The club has a membership of more than 500 members.

Sinclair Gasoline
—More Miles Per Dollar—
Mr. Farmer:
Did you ever compare your oil and gasoline station with your milk situation?
Is it the high price paid you for your milk that makes it so high in New York or is it the system of hauling it down there?
Our system of handling gas and oil is bound to save you money — no agents, no middleman, no tank wagons making deliveries 40 miles away.
Drive in and ask for prices on gasoline and oil for tractors and commercial uses.

Selections taken from "An Easter Cantanta". Text by Edith Sanford Tillotson. Music composed by Edward W. Norman.

Members of the choir: Miss Ruth Stanton, director; Mrs. Carrie Stapley, organist.

Sopranos: Miss Stanton, Madeline Short, Viola Crane, Mrs. Glenn A. Payne.

Bass: Mr. Bert Rouse.

Tenor: Rev. Ralph Webb.

Altos: Mrs. Edgar Dann, Mrs. Harold Wilson, Vesta Wilson, Betty Pepper, Ardis Warfle.

In the Methodist church Easter Sunday evening at 7:30 P. M. a unique community service of music with large orchestra and choir. Special soloists, an exceptional hour of inspiration.

Musical Program

Orchestra: William Tell, selection by G. Rossini. Arranged by Seredy, Tocaben.

Choir: Easter Anthem: "Christ is Risen", by William R. Spence.

Soprano solo with violin obligato: "Trust in the Lord", by Handel. Guest soloist, Mrs. Charles F. Abbott of Elmira. Obligato played by Miss Ruth Stanton.

Orchestra:

(a) "Pine Trees and Shadows", nocturne by L. Lockwood Moore. Cornet solo by William Wilson.

(b) "The Pilgrims" by Oley Speaks. Trombone solo by William C. Colburn.

Soprano solo: "Open the Gates of the Temple," Mendelssohn, Mrs. Charles F. Abbott.

Orchestra: "March of the Priests" from Athalia. Mendelssohn.

The Joash Chest Service will again be used at this community gathering. Rev. Ralph Webb will deliver a brief but inspiring message. All will unite their voices in singing the theme of Easter using our new hymn books.

Come early to the Methodist church on Sunday night. Doors open at 6:30 P. M. "All are welcome."

Members of the Orchestra

Officers: Miss Ruth Stanton, director; W. C. Colburn, assistant director; Mrs. Harold Wilson, accompanist; Miss Frances Colburn, assistant accompanist; Miss Madeline Short, president; Richard Dinniny, secretary and treasurer; Hubert Dininny, Librarian.

First violins: Walter Perkins Jr., Stanley Ackerson, Hubert Dinniny, Miss Ruth Stanton.

Clarinets: Madeline Short, Richard Dininny.

Cornet: William Wilson.

Second violins: Barbara Brewster, Doris Brewster, Robert Bullock, Bernard Spencer.

Trombones: W. C. Colburn, Frances Colburn.

Bass horn: William Colburn.

Last Sunday, Palm Sunday at Methodist church Mrs. Lattimer Brewster was the guest soloist. Mrs Brewster sang with pleasing effect and with inspiring and rich tone the contralto solo, "Rest in the Lord".

Members and friends of the church are asked to bring all flowers, plants and memorial pieces for decorative purposes early on Sunday morning. A committee will be on hand to place the same.

A woman carrying a bank book showing deposits of over $9,000 was found dead in a New York street this week. The woman, dressed as a man, apparently a human derelict, was discovered to carry an account marked "in trust" in the Bowery Savings Bank for the large sum. Police were looking for a man named in a notation in the book, thought to be her son.

The Governor of Oklahoma set a stake last week to mark the drilling of an oil well on the State Capitol grounds. Governor Marlan acted after a long dispute with the city council of Oklahoma City, in defiance of a zoning law forbidding well drilling in the area. Morlan planned to use troops if necessary to carry out his purpose, by maintaining that oil belonging to the state was being withdrawn by private interests.

Introduction To The Tax Bill

of adopting this principal. The government finds itself trying to regulate the dividend policy of corporations rather than to collect taxes justly.

But the dividend policy of each corporation is a matter that concerns the stockholders and their directors. It is not a matter on which the government ought to have an opinion, nor one about which, considering how differently corporations are situated, it can lay down a general rule.

The result, as we can see already, is confusion. For since all corporations cannot have the same dividend policy, the committee has already begun to discriminate and exempt. It will have to go on discriminating and exempting. For a general rule applying to all corporations is inherently a wrong rule for many of them.

There appears to be some doubt about the constitutionality of direct taxation of undistributed earnings. The doubt arises because the Supreme Court has held that a stock dividend is not income. It is for lawyers to decide whether this decision would invalidate the taxation as income of undistributed profits. For a layman it is difficult to see why it should.

A deeper difficulty of the direct method might be that the little fellow would have to pay taxes on his earnings even if the directors withheld them and he did not receive them as dividends. He might, therefore, have to pay a larger tax out of an unrealized income. Investigation may show that in practice his tax bill would not be greatly increased. But if it is, then this is undoubtedly an objection to a plan which in every other respect is not only more just but a more proper exercise of the government's relationship to private business.

It would be worth while to give a good deal of thought to seeing how serious this objection is and whether it cannot be met. For if it can be met, the tax program will be more just and more sound than the one now proposed. Would it be possible, for example, to let the stockholders vote whether they will operate under the proposed plan of a punitive tax on undivided profits or the alternative plan of regular income taxes on all profits? That might be an equitable solution. A board of directors ought to be able to persuade its stockholders that it is pursuing a sound dividend policy. The little fellow should have at least a nominal right to express his preference in regard to the disposition of his own profits. And if he does not agree with his directors, he can always sell out and select for his investment the stocks of a corporation whose policy suits him better.

Under the proposed plan as well as under the existing law, the smaller his total income the greater the excess taxes he pays on undivided income from corporations: under both plans the rate he pays is determined not by the income class in which he belongs but by the dividend policy of his board of directors.

One certain conclusion does, it seems to me, follow from realizing that it is not going to be easy to write a tax law which is just, sound and practicable. Whatever law is enacted now should run at a maximum for two years. This would mean that after the election the whole tax structure would have to be reconsidered. It needs to be. It is in a dozen different important ways unjust, unscientific, and unreliable. Congress would be well advised, therefore, to do the best it can temporarily nd at the same time to establish a permanent committee to make a thorough investigation of all the Federal taxes with a view to revising them in the next two years

If, as seems probable, the next two years are to be years of recovery, the atmosphere will be as favorable as possible to careful and deliberate tax reform. For it would be a great mistake to enter the next downward phase of the business cycle with as bad a tax system as we had in 1929 and still have today.

Dairymen Meet To Study Records

Steuben County dairymen, under the leadership of the farm bureau, have developed and are carrying on a farsighted, forward looking program that will greatly increase the income of the industry, stated Prof. Stanley J. Brownell in his address at the Dairy Banquet held at Bath Friday.

One hundred and fifty dairymen, mostly members of the Dairy Herd Improvement Associations, met to discuss the summary of the year's records which were interpreted on the basis of feeding by Prof. W. T. Crandall, and in terms of breeding practices by Prof. S. J. Brownell.

Burton Ketch of Wallace, presided and musical numbers were rendered by Tracy and Trena Calkins of Avoca, K. S. Ayres, Edward Marnock, Miss Frances Grow and Richard Jones of Bath, and Russell Stephens of Jasper. Dinner was served by ladies of the Eastern Star.

The kind of cows kept determines the price at which hay and silage are sold stated Mr. Crandall. Steuben County cows that produced 217 pounds of fat paid last year, after deducting fixed charges and labor costs, $3.88 a ton for hay and $1.29 a ton for silage. Cows that produced 390 pounds of fat paid on the same basis, $18.32 a ton for hay and $6.10 a ton for silage.

Figured another way, the 217-pound fat cows made $48 over feed costs and the 390-pound cows paid $113 over and above feed costs. Careful feeding practices pay large dividends according to the records made in the dairy herd improvement associations of Steuben County last year.

Cows do not transmit in terms of their own production, and the breeding value of a bull has little to do with his appearance, stated Mr. Brownell. Continuous production records and their interpretation on the basis of dam and daughter comparisons is the only sure way to a safe and sound breeding program.

Steuben ranks high among all counties of the state in the number of cows on test. Seventy-seven herds including 1497 cows were served by the three dairy herd improvement associations and 46 members owning 418 cows received the testing service through the dairy record club.

Honors Won By State Dairymen

First in Number of Dairy Herd Improvement Associations Operating

High ranking has been accorded to New York dairymen for work in dairy records by the bureau of dairy industry, United States Department of Agriculture.

The Empire State ranked first in the number of dairy herd improvement associations at the start of the new year, according to a report of the bureau. New York had ninety-six of these associations in operation, Wisconsin had ninety-five, and Pennsylvania, eighty-six.

New York has 50,864 cows on test, but ranked second to California with 66,630 cows on test. Wisconsin was third with 41,641 cows on test. According to the report, 2,180 New York dairymen were having their cattle tested. Wisconsin led with 2,269 dairymen and Pennsylvania was third with 1,800 herds on test.

Professor W. T. Crandall of the New York State College of Agriculture says more and more dairymen in the Empire State are keeping records on their herds, because "records are as important in their business as they are in banking, manufacturing, or any other commercial business.

"Dairy herd improvement associations consist of groups of dairymen who hire competent men to keep production and feed records on their herds. The work is carried on in cooperation with the bureau of dairy industry at Washington, the local county farm bureaus, and the dairy records office of the department of animal husbandry at Cornell University."

CAMERON MILLS

Mr. and Mrs. Hiram Reynolds and daughter Lorraine of Rathbone were calling in Cameron Mills Sunday.

Regnard Myres of Rathbone was in town Sunday.

Mr. Chilson of Canisteo was a business raller here Saturday.

Leigh Barker, Stanley Sutton, Milo Saxton and Lynn Saxton were in Montour Falls Thursday.

IT PAYS TO ADVERTISE IN THIS PAPER

Farm Bureau Notes Large Business Gain

A large increase is reported for all departments of the Farm Bureau program as compared with previous years. Membership has increased twenty-five per cent over last year and the requests for services are the largest on record.

In order to handle this increased volume of business efficiently, the bureau headquarters have been moved to offices on the third floor of the county office building on Steuben street.

In a meeting held recently directors of the Steuben County Farm Bureau elected Murray Barnes, of Avoca, president; A. E. Scudder of Painted Post, vice president; Leonard Drake, Prattsburg, secretary and Edward Heinaman, Bath, treasurer.

In my new connection I can meet your needs more quickly and more efficiently. Furthermore, I can SAVE YOU MONEY.

I believe, without qualification, that the Wall Street Garage, operated by L. L. Towner & Sons, is the BEST EQUIPPED GENERAL GARAGE IN NEW YORK STATE.

Yours for service,
CARL HAMILTON.

Put All Your Easter Needs

—In One Basket and Let a Davis's Delivery Boy Carry it Home.

You can buy your suit at one shop, your hat at another, and your shoes and accessories somewhere else; but that is like having four photographers take one picture. The best way—put your fashion faith in one store, making sure of the store to start with. Here the hats are selected to go with the suits, and the clothing geared to harmonize with the furnishings and shoes—so that the man dressed under Davis's label on Easter Day looks like a man who knows where he is going rather than a man who can't remember where he's been.

New spring suits and topcoats, new hats and caps, new shirts and neckwear, new underwear and hosiery; and new shoes for every member of the family.

Our stock is extensive but not expensive.

We are at your service.
